During her visit to District 7230's New York City conference in April, Mia Farrow only had one parting request: That she could come back and celebrate with the group when polio is completely eradicated. Though the award-winning actress has been linked with celebrities such as the Beatles, Frank Sinatra, and Woody Allen, she couldn't have been happier to pay tribute to New York and Bermuda Rotarians for their efforts in eradicating polio during the past 21 years.

"I'm so honored to be here to salute you in the work you've already done," says Farrow, who received Paul Harris Fellow Recognition from the district. "It's extraordinary. Because of the work you've done, we're now looking at the finish line to eradicate polio."
